THE DEERING MOWER.

John T. Kelly & Co., agents for Deering & Co., had offered a mower for the best five bushels of wheat at the fair. In the award of premiums by mistake the matter was overlooked. This may be explained by the fact, however, that the mower was not on the grounds. The mower, however, is referred to as a dandy and the summer county farmer getting it will, no doubt, often think of his fine wheat and prize.

HARVEST OF MONEY.

Mr. J. H. Stewart of Peabody, of the Doyle Lumber company, spent yesterday in the city and gave it out that some of the fellows in his town want to see Joe Young and Asland Wilkes trot a few lines by their own sweet selves. As an inducement to see the show they will put up for Young $5,000, provided Asland's friends put up the same amount. The race to be run on the Emporia track again thirty days. He made the talk among some of the boys. It is not known whether it is in earnest or for the purpose of getting it published by way of free advertising.

THE CONTENT TONIGHT.

A large number of the seats have been taken for the grand gold medal contest at the First Presbyterian church tonight, and nearly all of them will likely be taken today. This will be one of the events of the season, and the prospects are that with pleasant weather, the large auditoriums will be filled with a fine audience as was ever witnessed in Wichita. The decorations will be worth seeing.

CANT COME TO WICHITA.

In answer to the dispatch sent by the Republican club to the president a few days ago asking him to visit Wichita on his western trip, the following message was received last evening:

MIDLAND JUNCTION, Va., Oct. 6, '90.
It is impossible for the president to extend his trip to Wichita. Please accept his sincere thanks for your kind invitation.
E. W. HALLFORD.

METHODIST MINISTER'S MEETING.

Reverends W. J. Martindale, E. C. Beach, E. C. Pollard, R. T. Savin, S. Weir, J. D. Bodkin, C. C. Woods, G. W. Irwin, N. E. Harmon and J. F. Nesley, met at the First Methodist Episcopal church, and organized a Methodist Franchise Meeting, which is to hold monthly meetings for the purpose of discussing questions of interest to that denomination.

GRAND ORGAN RECITAL.

To the Editor of the Eagle.

I wish to call the attention of the public (especially those interested in music) to the musical treat in store for them next Wednesday evening October 8, at the First M. E. church of this city. They will hear some pipe organ music that will be a revelation to them compared to what they have heard heretofore. It will surprise many as to the variety and the effects that can be produced from the kind of instruments while under the control and fingers of one who has mastered its capabilities and understands registration to perfection.

Mr. Frank Taft of Brooklyn, who will give this recital, is a personal friend and classmate of mine, so I know who I am recommending. He was also the favorite pupil of Clarence H. Eddy of Chicago, who was so well pleased with his playing that arrangements were made for him to move to Chicago and take a special course.

A. W. SICKNER.

The Midland passenger train south Sunday evening was delayed near the Burton car works three hours. The engine jumped the track, but no one was injured.

Those who tramp the east side of Main daily, will notice with joy that a new and decent sidewalk is being put down in front of Witches and the Santa Fe ticket office.

A large force are busy on Douglas avenue at the Santa Fe crossing loading surplus dirt on the cars, paving and putting in extra tracks. The obnoxious switch which used to extend right across the street has been moved north and will no longer bother anybody.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE GAIETY COMPANY.

Tonight at the Crawford Grand the Lilly Clay Gaiety company will make their first appearance in this city. The following is taken from the New Orleans Picayune:

It is seldom we can write words of unqualified praise without fear or alloy about a traveling burlesque troupe, but the individual and collective superiority of Lilly Clay's Gaiety company renders at the present time the task an easy one. From the rising of the curtain upon the picture of loveliness entitled "Beauty in Distress" to the lowering of the same upon the last scene of Anthony and Cleopatra, with its superb scenic effects, witty dialogues and comical situations, presented last night, the audience was kept in the theatre, the applause of the crowded audience was continuous.

Flattening a Post.

Not long ago a post was starting at a seaside hotel, where he attracted some attention as a celebrity. Among the guests was a woman who wished her daughter to seem intimate terms with literature, and as far as possible, with literary people. Accordingly she set the girl at work to learn one of the poet's shorter pieces, which might have been a clever move to gain her point, but the effect of it was somewhat injured by the daughter's carelessness and ignorance.

On the same page with the poem in question—in a book of selections—was one by another and more famous writer, and the girl made the mistake of committing this instead of the one which her mother had intended.

At the first opportunity the young lady said to the poet in the presence of several of the guests:

"It is such a delight to meet one whose lines I have carried in my mind for years! The poem which I love better than any other in the world is one of yours."

"Indeed?" answered the smiling poet. "I had not flattered myself that I had written anything worthy of such honor. What is it?"

With an affected emphasis the girl repeated the poem she had learned, the company, of course, remaining silent till she had finished.

"It is lovely," murmured one of the guests, who did not recognize it.

"Yes," said the poet, "it is so good that I can only regret that Wordsworth should have been the liberty of writing it before it was born. Otherwise I should undoubtedly have written it myself."

The best of good breeding could not altogether repress the smiles of the bystanders, and the poor girl, suddenly remembering that her mother needed her, disappeared with much celerity.

"It is a pity," the poet said mildly, when she was out of hearing, "it is a pity that people cannot understand that we writers, vain though we may be, are not so blinded by vanity as to be unable to tell genuine admiration from the poorest of make believe."—Youth's Companion.

A remarkable freak of lightning was observed near Martin's Point, S. C., lately. A negro woman was sitting in her house with a 2-year-old child in her lap. Her husband was standing on the opposite side of the room. A thunder storm was in progress and a stroke of lightning descended upon the house. The child was instantly killed, the father severely, perhaps fatally, shocked, while the mother was not injured or even shocked by the stroke.

A bicyclist recently rode down Mount Washington, making the journey—about eight miles—in an hour and without stopping.

GREAT MEN'S ILLUSIONS.
DEAN SWIFT SAID ALL MEN ARE MAD IN SOME DEGREE.

Evidence Which Go to Prove the Truth of His Saying—Poets, Philosophers, Soldiers and Reformers Who Saw Spooks and Were Influenced by Them.

It has been said or sung that all men are more or less insane, differing only in degree. Certainly those who are considered sane—in which category the gentle reader is included—are liable to hallucinations, and it depends upon the extent to which we give way before, and believe in, the illusions of the brain, whether we walk abroad with our follies or are placed in a padded room.

Byron often received visits from a specter, but he knew it to be a creation of the imagination. Pope saw an arm apparently come through the wall, and made inquiries after its owner. Goethe states that he one day saw the exact counterpart of himself coming toward him. Ben Jonson spent the watches of the night an interested spectator of a crowd of Tartars, Turks and Roman Catholics, who rose up and fought round his arm chair till sunrise. Dr. Johnson heard his mother call his name in a clear voice, though she was at the time in another city. And Sir Joshua Reynolds, leaving his house, thought the lamps were trees and the men and women bushes agitated by the breeze.

VISIONS APPEARED.

Nicolas was alarmed at the appearance of a dead body which vanished and came again at intervals. This was followed by human faces, which came into the room, and after gazing upon him for a while departed. None of his friends was among the faces he saw. After enjoying a silent acquaintance with his visitors for some weeks, they began to speak, and he describes their conversation as brief and agreeable. Such visitors would cause many to lose their reason, but Nicolas knew they were but the effects of indigestion.

Bostock, the physiologist, saw similar figures and faces, and after recovering from a momentary surprise, he set himself to study the habits and customs of his curious visitors. This he had ample opportunity to do, as they remained with him three days and nights. There was one human face constantly before him for twenty-four hours, the features and headgear as distinct as those of a living person, yet having no resemblance to any one he had ever known. Finally the phantom disappeared, to make way for troops of little human figures, which disported themselves like fanciful figures in his entertainment.

The reason, says Connolly, that Nicolas and Bostock did not become hopelessly insane was because they never believed in the reality of the visions. The effects of the illusions of some men have been felt in history. Religions have been founded on the words of men supposed to have been inspired, but who were merely suffering from a form of madness which medical science calls "ecstasy." Oliver Cromwell, lying sleepless on his couch, saw the curtains open and a gigantic woman appear, who told him he would become the greatest man in England.

In 1806 Gen. Rapp, having important news, entered the emperor's apartment unannounced, and found the great warrior in a rapt attitude, gazing at the ceiling. The general made an intentional pause, whereupon Napoleon seized his arm and said excitedly, "Look up there!" He looked, and saw nothing. "Why," said the emperor, "do you not see it? It is my star; it is before you beaming; it has never deserted me. I see it on every great occurrence urging me onward; it is an unerring omen of success."

SPIRITS THAT INSURE.

Some men have been inspired to persevere in their life's work by self-conjured illusions. Lope, lying wounded during the siege of Pamplona, saw the Virgin, who encouraged him to prosecute his mission. Benvenuto Cellini, imprisoned at Rome, resolved to free himself by self destruction, but was deterred by the apparition of a young woman of wondrous beauty, whose reproaches turned him from his purpose. This spirit returned and consoled him on other occasions when he was low spirited. Descartes was followed by an invisible person whose voice he heard urging him to continue his researches after truth.

Many have fondly clung to their illusions, and though reasonable in most things have at least been distinctly mad in one. Tasso firmly believed that he had a familiar genius, whose great delight and chief recreation was to converse with him. His friend, J. B. Mansueti, tried to persuade him of this illusion, whereupon the poet offered to introduce his unbelieving friend to the spirit. But though he often heard Tasso in conversation with the imaginary being, it never made itself visible to others. A few believe that Luther actually held a warm discussion with an important personage from the other world, yet that he believed it himself we have his word, and he has even left on record some account of the dispute, from which it would appear that his opponent is not so silly as we have been led to believe. At any rate he could not wind himself argumentatively round the sturdy priest, Ravaillac, while chanting the "Miserere" and "De Profundis," fondly believing that the sounds he emitted were of the nature and had the full effect of a trumpet. Count Emmanuel Swedenborg believed that he had the privilege of interviewing persons in the spirit world. Jean Engeström was under a similar impression. Zimmerman was for some time in constant fear of an imaginary enemy, whom he expected to arrive at any moment, break into and wreck his dwelling.—London Standard.

Admired of Their Own Jest.

On the fourth of July, after the air ship ascension had proved a failure, a man approached P. C. Campbell, the inventor, and said, "Mr. Campbell, that was an excellent ascension, allow me to express my appreciation of it," and he deposited a penny in Mr. Campbell's hand. Mr. Campbell gravely thanked him, and a second man came up and went through the same proceeding and was followed by a third. They then all enjoyed a hearty laugh. The inventor calmly looked at the three come and remarked, "Well, you can see that I will convince you that I have considerable. The trio were so impressed with his reply that they apologized for their rudeness and expressed their belief in him.—Buffalo Enquirer.

The Saturday Half Holiday.

When the Saturday half holiday law was enacted there were some pessimistic persons who predicted that its operation would not only injure business, but would lead to an increase in crime because of the idleness of thousands of working people. Strange to say, the police records show a decreased percentage of arrests since the law went into effect. Although the observance of the day has steadily increased, the disposition to commit breaches of the peace on the part of the working people, who have been thrown upon their own resources for self amusement, has been curbed rather than stimulated. It was the purpose of the law to afford wage earners an opportunity to enjoy, on the threshold of the sacred day of rest, a half day's recreation during the summer months. Two years' experience has proved that the men for whose benefit the law was passed have apparently spent their time in peaceable excursions and pastimes. The public parks in this city and in Brooklyn have been crowded on Saturday afternoons as they never were before, and the carrying capacity of the city's boats has been tested to its utmost limit.

Bankers and brokers who were opposed to the innovation when the half holiday law was proposed have not only become reconciled to the new order of things, but most of them now welcome the holiday with undiminished pleasure. In the downtown business centers there is a growing tendency to make the whole of Saturday a holiday during the summer months. Many Wall street brokers do not attempt to do any business on Saturday, but take cheerful leave of their offices on Friday night and divert business care from their minds until Monday morning. This same spirit prevails also among the dry goods dealers. All of this goes to show that the American citizen is fully able to enjoy a holiday when it is forced upon him by the law.—New York Times.

Beginning Young.

The New York Times says that at a recent Gilmore concert at Manhattan beach was a baby who, on account of her beauty, was taking the attention of the audience in her immediate vicinity from Patrick Sarsfield and his musicians. The child, so several women said, and the men evidently thought, was too lovely for anything. Her chief beauty was the golden ringlets that curled from under her hat and made a regular halo around the chubby face.

Baby had climbed by the aid of the seat back to a standing position, and was cooing lovingly at an old gentleman behind her. The old gentleman pulled one of the golden ringlets. With a quick movement the little one drew her hat off and held it out to him. All the beautiful ringlets went with the hat. They were sewed around the edge on the inside. The lovely child stood there an ordinary looking baby with thin and strongly lined of a different hue from the rest of her face.
